Press Release

Goole, 26th September, 2003: Goole Intermodal Terminal has been formed by a partnership of British Waterways, East Riding of Yorkshire Council, EWS, Wykeland Group and Danbrit Shipping Limited.

Goole Intermodal Terminal will design, build and operate a 26-acre multimodal terminal, which will link and make interchange easy and efficient for freight by Rail, Barge, Road and Ship. The Terminal will be the further-most inland Intermodal freight transshipment facility in Great Britain to include all three modes of surface transport. This will offer Customers and users of the terminal an unrivalled choice and flexibility.

The working time directive which is due to become law in Great Britain next year will create a large shortage of lorry drivers and transport operators. As a result, green transport will expand and improve significantly and it will become vital for industry to reconsider its logistic policy. It will be most important to ensure that all means of transport can be integrated in the logistics chain.

Goole Intermodal Terminal will be built in stages and will be able to offer bespoke handling operations and warehouses. Stage one of the Terminal is expected to be operational from the middle of 2004.

The company's web site www.gooleintermodal.co.uk will be operational as from today.
